Northampton County has certified the May 15 primary election results.

County Election Registrar Deb DePaul said a panel of three Democrats and three Republicans, appointed by the parties, finished canvassing the votes May 21.

According to the results, an Easton Area School Board candidate won a spot on the Republican ballot by one vote and another candidate was added to the Lower Mount Bethel Township supervisors' ballot because of write-in votes.

In Easton Area School District's Region III, Kerri Leonard-Ellison beat out retired teacher Joe Panto for the Republican ballot by 1 vote, 514 votes against Panto's 513 votes.

The two will face off in November, as Panto won the Democratic nomination for the Region III seat.

Frank Capobianco won a spot on the ballot for Lower Mount Bethel supervisor through 105 write-in votes. He won a spot on the Republican ballot even though he's a Democrat.

"Anyone can write in anybody," DePaul said.

Republican Susan Disidore won the other Republican seat with 166 votes. The two will face Democrats Mark Hess and Patrick Rissmiller in November.

Democrats Andrew Jasso, Nicholas Walters and William Maurer, and Republicans Martin Romeril, Melanie Whiteleather and Gina Gilbert checked voting results from the county's electronic voting machines.
